WALT DISNEY Spice Jar Collection

Jars shown smaller than actual size of 4" high.
Spice rack: 18 3/4" h x 23 1/2" w.

From Mickey Mouse to the Lion King, Disney's most beloved animated heroes are now appearing in a premier collection of 24 spice jars of Lenox fine porcelain.

Handcrafted of ivory porcelain and embellished with 24 karat gold, each jar will portray a classic scene from an enchanting Disney movie.

The garlic jar features Lady and the Tramp at their romantic spaghetti dinner. On the nutmeg jar, Pluto blows out his birthday cake candles. You'll see all your favorite characters—Aladdin, Donald Duck, Bambi—in original art from Walt Disney Studios.

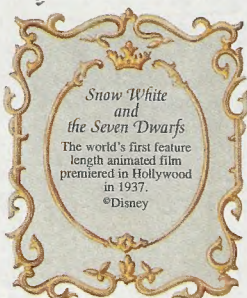

The lid of each jar recalls a marquee from the heyday of movie palace architecture and will be painted by hand in a rich pastel color to complement the Disney art. The spice name on each jar will appear in gold lettering.

Exclusively by Lenox

The Walt Disney Spice Jar Collection is available from Lenox by subscription. And the base of each imported porcelain jar will bear both the Disney and the Lenox® names in 24 karat gold.

Subscribers will receive their jars for just $14.95 each. A custom hardwood spice rack will be included at no extra cost. To begin your subscription to a collection your entire family will delight in, send no money now. But mail your subscription form today.

Fascinating Disney facts on the back of each jar.

NEWS FROM AROUND THE WORLD OF DISNEY

The Magic Kingdom END OF AN ERA

It has played to more than seven million guests at Disneyland. From the original 12 parade units and 117 performers it has grown to 29 units and 200 participants. And it has been a landmark event almost every spring, summer, and fall since its 1972 debut.

It, of course, is The Main Street Electrical Parade.

And 1996 marks the end of an era—for in October The Main Street Electrical Parade takes its final bow.

Then it's lights out.

In its time The Main Street Electrical Parade made Theme Park history. It was the genesis for all the fantastic shows and parades that followed in its footsteps—shows and parades featuring characters from Aladdin to The Lion King to Fantasmic!, that state of the art festival uniting laser, fireworks, and pure magic into dazzling spectacle.

But there are special treats for those fortunate to visit Disneyland for The Main Street Electrical Parade's swan song. The Magic Kingdom offers special commemorative merchandise celebrating the occasion. And the parade itself features seven of the original floats.

So catch The Main Street Electrical Parade—before it glows away.

And, beginning June 25 don't miss the newest entertainment spectacular in Disneyland—"The Hunchback of Notre Dame's Festival of Fools," starring Quasimodo and Esmeralda.

Collectibles NEW DIRECTIONS FOR ENCHANTED PLACES

On June 29, The Walt Disney Classics Collection unveils the Beast's Castle

The Walt Disney Classics Collection explores exciting new directions in its Enchanted Places collection of fine sculptures—but you'll have to wait until June 29 before the first new Enchanted Places sculpture is completely unveiled at the International Collectibles Expo in Chicago.

We can tell you what that sculpture is: a beautiful, highly detailed rendering of the Beast's Castle from Beauty and the Beast. This spectacular piece required over 200 painting steps to capture the castle at the moment it transformed from a dark and dreary place to a beautiful, illuminated mansion.

Adding to their collectibility, every new Enchanted Places sculpture will feature an annual production mark and a new logo. Upon registration, the new owner of each sculpture receives a special deed transferring ownership of the setting from its old inhabitant(s) to its new owner.

Enchanted Places are part of the award-winning Walt Disney Classics Collection, available at fine gift and collectible stores nationwide, The Disney Store, and all four of the Disney Theme Parks.

At last...Summer!

FROM THE FIRST barbecue of the season to the long Labor Day weekend, it's a time of wonderful extremes: loud and bright Fourth of July fireworks, silent fireflies, hot sun, cold pools, exhausting hikes, bike rides, quiet evenings on the porch, staring at stars. The kids, too, move in extremes, from that state of delighted excitement to that boredom freedom from routine brings.

This issue brings solutions and opportunities for all aspects of the summer season. Searching for a great family adventure? Read about the wide range of train treks available all over North America. Want a fun—and frequently free—activity to tack on to a trip or to turn a quiet day into something special? Find out about the hundreds of factory tours available for families.

Then learn what to do when the sunscreen goes on a little late: a great tip on how to treat a painful sunburn. Finally, what's the most common item of clothing in the summer? The T-shirt. We'll tell you something about the tee's history and evolution and why it became an essential part of everyone's kick-backed wardrobe.

Daytripper FACTORY TOURS

How do they make potato chips? Chocolate bars? Coins? Soft drinks? With today's fast-paced lifestyle, few families have a chance to consider—much less watch—how milk ends up in cartons, or how trucks, tractors, or television programs are made.

Imagine watching workers string giant bobbins with a rainbow of woolsens, then seeing one employee flip a switch and hearing the noise as miles of Pendleton blankets are woven before your eyes. Driving northwest from Walt Disney World to Ocala, Florida, you can stop and see firetrucks manufactured at Emergency One. Watch pretzels being made at Anderson Bakery in Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

Many of America's factories regularly conduct free or low-cost tours designed to show families and others how their products are made. Tours can be fascinating and fun, says Bruce Brumberg, who, with his wife Karen Axelrod, wrote Watch It Made in the U.S.A. (John Muir Publications, 1995, $16.95). The book includes about 250 companies that offer a wide range of tours, detailing everything from cost and freebies to hours, suitability for children, and a description of what each tour actually covers.

Brumberg and his wife got interested in factory tours because they were fascinated with learning how products are made. "It's the real thing; you're bombarded with sights and smells, innovative machinery and a fascinating factory environment," says Brumberg. He also thinks the tours have an important educational value, not just because they show the creativity involved in making machinery and designing the production process, but because they

MARIE OSMOND INTRODUCES "ROSIE & RAGS"

Marie Osmond has created "Rosie and Rags", a playful new addition to her Marie Osmond Fine Porcelain Collectible Doll line. This charming pair of rag doll twins with their unique, hand-painted, fine bisque porcelain faces and hands, and red button noses are sure to capture your heart!

Whether swinging from the big apple tree in the backyard, or any other adventure that one could imagine, "Rosie and Rags" cherub faces are simply irresistible.

Marie collaborated with her good friend and award-winning sculptor, Beverly Stoehr, to create a pair of refreshingly unique dolls that are sure to delight both the novice as well as the expert doll collector. And what child wouldn't adore having "Rosie and Rags" sitting on their bed or night table! Each doll comes with their own Marie Osmond logo bracelet, handtag, and personalized certificate of authenticity especially written for each doll by Marie, herself.

"Rosie and Rags" are simply irresistible with their bright red yarn wigs and adorable red, white and blue outfits. Their combination cloth and pellet bodies were designed specifically so they can be easily displayed in a seated position. Both dolls have the traditional rag doll, soft sculpted, red and white candy-striped legs, and black shoes.

Give yourself, or someone you love the Marie Osmond "Rosie and Rags" dolls. They're twice the charm and twice as much fun!

Children aged two to six sometimes have trouble using an adult-sized mouse. Now there's Microsoft's EasyBall ($54.95), which requires less fine-motor control and makes positioning the cursor easier for younger children. The kid-friendly mouse comes with Microsoft's Explorapedia on CD-ROM.

A CAPITOL-ISTIC FOURTH

Here's a great way to experience the 4th of July: Check out Washington, DC's great landmarks. Our Nation's Capital in 3-D (United States Historical Society, 1995, $9.95), for children ages 8-12, includes 3-D glasses that make the photos look as if you are actually there. • expose visitors to careers and opportunities beyond those typically considered.

• The best bet for families is to look for tours available either close to home or near a travel destination, says Brumberg. The book puts tours together by state and provides a complete index that lists them by product category, company, and area.

• Kids typically like to see products they use or are familiar with—soft drinks, teddy bears, candy, firetrucks—but sometimes just watching the manufacturing process can be fascinating.

• Adults are generally drawn to products they enjoy, from golf clubs to blown glass, tea, wine, or fortune cookies. And there's a bonus, too: watching how another business tackles problems can spark new ideas they can take back to their own work environments.

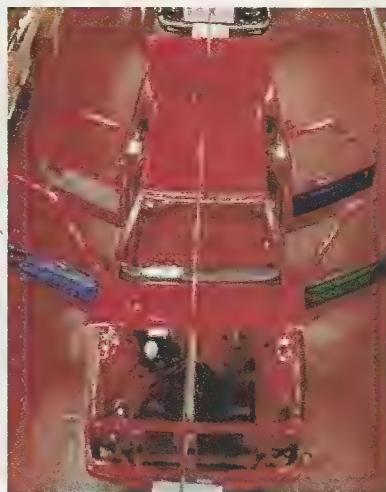

• Brumberg offers several safety tips to help ensure the success of your excursion. Families should wear comfortable, closed-toe shoes and bring a wrap since some factory environments vary in temperature along the tour. Visitors should stay with the tour guide and make sure children do not wander off, and they should wear any protective equipment that is requested or required. Participants should not touch anything, unless the tour guide specifically hands something to them. Brumberg

• also advises families to be sure to call ahead to the factory to confirm tour availability, dates, and times.

• Brumberg says he can't imagine going anywhere now without looking for a factory tour to take. "There's so much 'Wow! I didn't know that!' in every one of them," he says.

Get Up & Go TRAIN TREKKING

There is no better way to go back in time and recreate old-fashioned travel than to take a train trip. Not only can you see scenery often unreachable by car, but the very experience of train travel—its sights and sounds—are exciting, especially for children.

"Most kids have rail-roading in their blood," says Amos Cordova, vice president of Durango & Silverton Narrow Gauge Railroad, in Durango, Colorado. "Older people relate to the railroad historically as a memoir of days gone by and a bit of the Old West," he says. "The railroad is great because it let's you go back in time if you let your mind wander a little bit."

There are hundreds of trips available throughout the U.S. and Canada. Some feature authentic, rebuilt steam engines, while others use diesel or electric power. Trip lengths vary from an hour or more to two- or three-day adventures that involve overnight stays either onboard or at cities along the way.

The train excursion from Durango to Silverton and back features a locomotive built in 1923 and coaches constructed back in 1878, says Cordova. The only way through the Animus Canyon to Silverton is by train, and Cordova says the view and the experience is exactly what travelers would have experienced back in 1882, when the railroad was built.

Eric Belanger, spokesman for Rocky Mountain Rail Tours in western Canada, says "train travel gives families time away from the cities and the malls to just read, play board games, talk and think." The dramatic scenery traversed on the trip from Vancouver to Lake Louise includes glaciated mountains, rapids, waterfalls, tunnels, trestle bridges, and wildlife such as deer, elk, bear, and moose.

Belanger says train travel is non-stressful because there is no need to worry about maps, directions, bathrooms, or even food. Most trains have snack cars; some, such as Rocky Mountain Rail Tours, provide attendant-delivered, airline-style meals.

Train trips can be combined with a wide range of activities, such as exploring a city, hiking, boating, mountain-biking, or river rafting, says Belanger. He advises families to bring a video camera—with extra batteries—and travel games for the children. Cameras and binoculars are also highly recommended.

Children are often fascinated with the railroad experience itself; they love walking through the cars, watching the scenery go by, and just listening to the train's rhythm, says Belanger. "I still remember the childhood train trips I took," he says.

ON TRACK

In addition to the trips mentioned in "Train Trekking," there are many other popular excursions. Here's a small sample:

Yosemite Mountain Sugar Pine Railroad, Fishcamp, CA, (209) 683-7273: A four-mile run on a narrow-gauge steam line through beautiful scenery.

Cumbres & Toltec Scenic Railroad, Chama, New Mexico, (505)

756-2151: The nation's longest and highest narrow-gauge steam railroad climbs to 10,015 feet elevation on its 64-mile run to Antonito, Colorado. Then the return trip to Chama is made by shuttle van.

Herber Valley Railroad, Herber City, Utah, (801) 654-5601: A 32-mile trek to Vivian Park, passing by beautiful trees, high meadows, and a waterfall.

Overexposed DAMAGE CONTROL

Despite diligent efforts to slap on plenty of sunscreen, it's still possible to miss a spot or somehow end up with a sunburn. What's the best way to treat it?

Teresita A. Lauda, MD, director of pediatric dermatology at SUNY, Health Science Center at Brooklyn, New York, says parents should give acetaminophen (Tylenol) or aspirin and use an easy-to-make homemade compress solution. The Tylenol reduces pain and treats any fever that may develop, while the compresses reduce swelling and discomfort.

Dr. Lauda suggests combining one part milk with one part water, adding a few ice cubes, and then dipping light, clean cloths into the mixture, wringing them out, and applying them on sunburned areas for about 20 minutes.

{ We know the routine. }

They go to camp.

They go to the pool.

They go to the park.

In between, they go,

"I'm hungry."

THE AFRICAN AMERICAN HERITAGE TOUR

Get a free, 10-page, self-guided tour brochure that follows the route of the Underground Railroad—the route fleeing slaves took to escape to non-slave states and Canada before the Civil War—through several towns in northern Ohio. The booklet describes many of those who helped with and traveled the Underground Railroad, as well as listing historic sites in several cities. For a copy, call the Lorain County Visitors Bureau, (800) 334-1673.

- twice a day, for two days. After each
- compress treatment, Lauda recom-
- mends gently drying the skin and then
- applying a 1% hydrocortisone lotion (for
- larger areas) or 1% hydrocortisone oint-
- ment (for smaller areas) to further prevent inflammation. After 48 hours, the pain and discomfort caused by most sunburns will subside.

For children with severe sunburns that cover more than 20% of

- their bodies, Dr. Lauda
- recommends taking them to a physician
- or nurse practitioner to make sure they
- are not suffering from dehydration or
- other systemic problems sometimes
- associated with bad burns.

- The best treatment is prevention,
- Lauda says, and she encourages par-
- ents to apply sunscreen with sun protection factor (SPF) of 15 or more, 30 minutes before going outside; reapply the lotion every two hours. She also recommends staying out of the sun during the most intense hours of ultraviolet exposure, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

For infants six months old or younger, sunscreen is not recommended; rather light, tightly woven clothing, hats, and stroller canopies offer protection.

While sunburns are easily treatable, in long-run terms they can be responsible for raising a person's risk for malignant melanoma and other skin cancers, says Lauda. "Nobody dies from sunburn, but the long term effects, depending on how fair your skin is, can be devastating."

HAPPY BIRTH

It's amazing what a kid can do with a printer and a mouse these days.

TOTALLY TEE

THE TEE IS THE MOST POPULAR item in America's kick-backed couture. It's cool, it's comfortable, it offers a chance to display everything from favorite haunts to travel destinations, political messages and special interests. Experts estimate that more than a billion T-shirts are sold every year in the United States.

The precise history of the tee is in dispute; researchers offer several theories. The tee started out as underwear, probably as part of the nautical attire worn by British sailors. In America, undershirted longshoremen unloaded tea in Annapolis, Maryland, in the 17th century—it may have been then that the "tea" became "T" or "tee." (Take your pick.)

In 1913, the U.S. Navy adopted the crew-necked, short-sleeved white cotton undershirt to be worn under a jumper, in part to cover sailors' chest hairs.

By the late '30s, Hanes and Sears, Roebuck began marketing cotton undershirts for 24 cents each. Sears advertised the shirts as perfect as either undershirts or outer garments. During World War II, the Navy asked suppliers for millions of white T-shirts; the Marine Corps used sage green. After the war, the U.S. Army went in for olive drab.

During the '60s, T-shirts became political billboards worn by college protesters. Gradually, everyone from surfers to seniors sported the T.

"It's like a canvas, a greeting card or a souvenir," says Rick Ralston, founder of Crazy Shirt, in Aiea, Hawaii.

"It's art."

Sneak Preview! Animation expert Charles Solomon takes you behind the scenes of Disney's 34th animated classic!

"The characters in the novel are like characters from a fairy tale: They have an almost iconic power about them. Even if people don't know the story per se, they know who Quasimodo is, they know who Esmeralda is. They know that it's about a mysterious bell ringer who falls in love with a gypsy and saves off a great siege of the cathedral. Characters who live on this scale lend themselves to the kind of hyper-real storytelling you seek for animated films."

—CO-DIRECTOR KIRK WISE

THE VISION

The Hunchback of Notre Dame, The Walt Disney Studio's 34th animated feature, represents both a continuation and a break for the team of Kirk Wise, Gary Trousdale and Don Blinn, the directors and producer who made Beauty and the Beast (1991). Although it contains elements of the Beauty and the Beast story, Victor Hugo's novel story is set in the grimy, crowded Paris of 1487—a sharp contrast to the softly lit world of Beauty.

Early on, we talked with art director David Goetz about how we were going to make the vision of medieval Paris world apart from Beauty and the Beast come alive. Wise: "Back in the day, a word where there were no male spirits and no fairy godmother was going to the story. Quasimodo into a hard, solid prince, we thought it needed a partner too." David took a lot of his cues from Hugo's descriptions of life in the streets, how there was heaven above and pretty much hell below in the streets of Paris.

The directors, after a study in contrasts: Wise is dark and clean-shaven, with short hair; Trousdale's long red hair and beard emphasize his rumpled appearance. Everything in Wise's office seems to have its place. Trousdale's office suggests an untidy playground littered with toys and awards. But a few minutes spent in their can play reveal why the two men form such an effective team. They share a vision so completely, they can finish each other's sentences about their film and its characters.

THE GIRL

In The Hunchback of Notre Dame, Hugo's portrayal of the moral extremes of the Middle Ages hinges on Esmeralda, the gypsy dancer whose beauty dazzles not only Quasimodo, but the good soldier, Phoebus, and Frollo, the arch-hypocrite.

Unlike many Disney heroines, Esmeralda is not an innocent who sings to the birds: She's a street performer and a member of a persecuted minority.

During production on Beauty, Trousdale noted Belle was "smarter and a little more mature" than Ariel in The Little Mermaid (1989). "Esmeralda is probably a little bit older than Belle," Trousdale continues. "I've always pictured her as in her early '20s. She's the first

THE STREETS OF PARIS

To people the streets Esmeralda inhabits with the crowds Hugo describes, Wise and Trousdale turned to computer-generated imagery (CGI). Building on the techniques used for the epic wildebeest stampede in The Lion King, a team of artists headed by Kiran Joshi created up to 10,000 townspeople and soldiers to fill the square during the film's Festival of Fools and its climactic siege of the cathedral.

"Kiran and his crew exceeded our wildest expectations," says Trousdale. "We had initially planned to limit the crowds to quick shots with layers of smoke over them, so the audience would never get too good a look at them."

"The first test we saw was Quasimodo as the King of Fools being marched through the square," recalls Wise. "The drawn characters and effects and the computer-generated characters and effects were blended so effectively, it looked like Quasi was smack in the middle of Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade. We restaged several scenes to showcase what we discovered we were able to do."

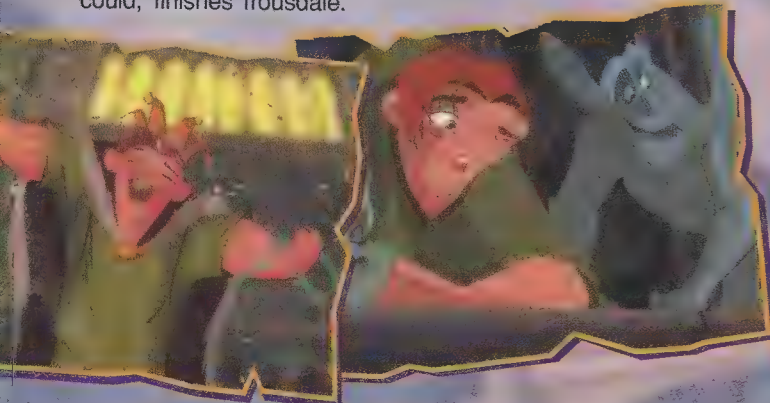

Charles Solomon is an internationally respected critic and historian of animation; his most recent book is The Disney That Never Was: Stories and Artwork from Five Decades of Unproduced Animation.

FAIRY TALE

Disney animated 'bad girl': She's not an innocent princess like every other girl has been—not to cast aspersions on our heroine—but she's had a hard life.

"She's a little more hard-bitten than Belle," agrees Wise. "Where Belle is a dreamer, Esmeralda is a realist. She's lived on the streets, she's dealt with persecution her entire life, and it's toughened her. But beneath that tough exterior, there's tenderness and compassion. What she wishes for more than anything else in the world is that all prejudice could be stripped away and people could look at each other as they really are."

"She doesn't believe it can really happen, but she wishes it could," finishes Trousdale.

As a "comedian who just wanted to get off the road," Tim Allen "sold a TV show to Disney." It became a hit, an awesome hit. Then Allen wrote a book. It became a bestseller. Then Allen did something most television stars and standup comics can only dream about. Tim Allen became a movie star.

"I Never Wanted t

IN 1991, TIM ALLEN PAID HIS FIRST VISIT to Sound Stage 4 at the Walt Disney Studios. There the set for a new series called Home Improvement was under construction. Allen took one look around and asked his Disney escorts a question: "If this show doesn't work—can I have all that wood?"

Needless to say Tim Allen's lumber room saw no Home Improvement. Now in its fifth season, Home Improvement, which Allen describes as the "Men are Pigs' at home" show, continues to rank among the top 10 programs in the country. It has earned Allen numerous awards, including The People's Choice Award for Favorite Male Performer in a Television Series for four consecutive years and a Golden Globe.

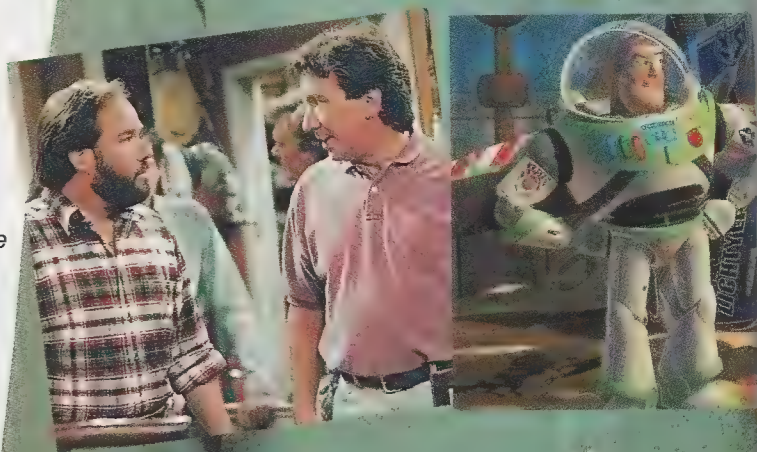

True to his character on and off-camera, upon achieving star status, Allen awarded himself with a prized toy: a brand spankin' new and shiny...compost shredder.

And like Jerry Seinfeld and Paul Reiser, Tim Allen translated his TV talent to the bestseller list with a 1994 book, Don't Stand Too Close to a Naked Man.

But 1994 saw Tim Allen make an even greater transition. He joined ranks with John Travolta, Robin Williams, Jim Carrey and Bruce Willis by becoming a movie star: he played the "heavy" in Walt Disney Pictures' holiday hit The Santa Clause.

Of course stardom didn't come easy: for the part Allen donned a 40-pound Santa suit that made him feel more like Scrooge. "It was an ordeal—one I'd never want to repeat," he admits.

Allen then capitalized on his success: he lent his voice to the character

Buzz Lightyear for Disney's first completely computer-animated hit, Toy Story. This spring, Allen commenced work on his third film, a Disney comedy called An Indian in the City.

Having started his career as a humble stand-up comic, Allen claims that being a movie-star was never his life goal.

"I was a comedian who just wanted to get off the road," he says. "I wanted to do a TV show. So I sold a TV show to Disney. I'm not sorry I ever did it [made a movie], but it wasn't my intent. I didn't want to graduate to movies, I never wanted to be a movie star, none of that [garbage]."

Born in Colorado, Allen was one of six children. At age of 11, his "world changed active director for an advertising firm in Detroit; soon he moved in front of the camera as a commercial spokesperson.

In 1979, on a dare from a friend, he made his first stand-up appearance at Detroit's Comedy Castle. Owner Mark Ridley recalls that Allen was not the typical over-age class clown: in his first appearance, Allen, dressed in a coat and tie, "was a bundle of nerves, shaking his hands and pacing himself into a frenzy. But boom, once he was up there, he was in control."

Allen struck gold when he simply started talking about what he loves. "What really interested me was garages and tools and all that I call 'men's stuff.' The more I started talking about it, the more I would get men to stand up and listen to my overnight" when his father was killed in a car accident. His mother remarried two years later and the family moved to a Detroit suburb, Birmingham, where he struggled through high school.

A class cut-up, Allen's favorite subject was shop; his true love was cars. One summer, he traded work at a local speed shop for a custom-built, tricked-out dune buggy—not exactly a practical car for those long Michigan winters. But try telling a teenager that, especially one who's as nuts about cars as Allen was and still is. He collects cars as a leisure-time hobby: Among his four-wheeled treasures is a '66 Ferrari.

Allen eked his way through Western Michigan University with a degree in television production. He went to work as a cre-comedy. And then women would go, 'He's like that,' and it started getting couples to enjoy the show."

Allen's big break came strolling backstage one night after a club performance: Disney executives, including Michael Eisner. "It was one of those magic nights," Allen recalls. "They came backstage and said they'd like to have a meeting with me at Disney."

With the success of Home Improvement, Allen submitted a script to Disney. The story was a dark fantasy about a man who accidentally shoots Santa Clause. Eight drafts later, Allen began toolin' around in a Santa fat-suit, and audiences and movie critics alike embraced him in The Santa Clause.

Mega-success hasn't ruined the bemused and self-deprecating Allen. He, Laura, his college sweetheart and wife of 12 years, and Kady, their 7-year-old daughter, still keep a home in a Birmingham, Michigan, neighborhood.

And Allen still hangs with his old pals, including Ken Calvert, a Detroit disc jockey. Calvert says he still tries to match Allen in power toys. When Calvert cross-cut his yard with twin 21-inch blade Lawn Boys, Allen bested him on a John Deere riding mower with Baby Moon hubcaps.

Okay, so if Allen never intended to become a "movie star," just what is his life's goal?

"Actually," Allen laughs, "what I want to do is host Tool Time for real. I love that show."

A Disney Channel World Premiere Movie

MEET ALLISON JONES, A STAR IN OUR ORIGINAL FILM "NIGHTJOHN"

IT'S NO BIG DEAL MAKING A MOVIE AT AGE 12, even if your co-stars are Beau Bridges and Carl Lumbly. Not if you're Allison Jones, anyway. After all, Allison was 9 when she sang the national anthem at a rally in Augusta, Georgia, for then-presidential hopeful Bill Clinton. In fact, Allison sang, at his request, at one of Clinton's inaugural dinners a few months later. Now 12, the 6th-grader portrays Sarny in the new Disney Channel film

Nightjohn. Based on Gary Paulsen's acclaimed novel for young readers, Nightjohn is a tale of courage and self-sacrifice, as the mythic slave Nightjohn (played by Carl Lumbly) dares to give Sarny magical gifts that will transform her world: the power of reading and writing. As Sarny, Allison Jones brings an impressive skill to her first film role. "Whatever she does, she's going to be good at it," says Nightjohn's acclaimed director Charles Burnett ("To Sleep with Anger"). That's good, because there's a lot that Allison Jones wants to accomplish. "My mother will ask me what I want to be," Allison says, "and I'll never say just one thing." So what does Allison want to be? Simple: a singer, model, actress, dancer, pianist, poet, painter, artist, and writer. As for Nightjohn's premiere on June 1, Allison plans to have a slumber party with her friends and watch the movie on TV.

A Disney Summer Comedy

THE UNDERDOGS OF "HEAVYWEIGHTS"

DIRECTOR/WRITER STEVEN BRILL AND CO-WRITER JUDD APATOW brought personal experience and insight to Heavyweights, the Disney comedy about kids at a fat camp who rebel against tyrannical fitness guru Tony Perkis (Ben Stiller in an outrageous comedic turn). Both Brill and Apatow spent part of their younger days engaged in activities that left them out of adolescent society's mainstream. Brill, a self-described "Jewish kid from Miami," experienced life one summer at an athletic YMCA camp; Apatow preferred to wile away his spare time in the control booth of his school's radio station. So when the two turned their hand to Heavyweights, the result was a "movie about underdogs," Apatow says, "kids who are really cool but, because they don't act, or in this case, look the same as everybody else, are treated like they aren't cool." Brill also adds that, "Heavyweights has a rebellious spirit to it, a real raucous quality, but not crass for the sake of being crass. It's not about losing or gaining weight. It's about societal misfits and how what you see isn't necessarily all there is."

Learning To Read Has Never Been So Much Fun!

Learning to read early is one of the most important skills your child can develop. Over 70 years of research has proven "systematic phonics" to be one of the easiest, most effective methods for learning to read.

Both The Phonics Game and Junior Phonics use this proven approach, building reading skills with entertaining games and exercises. Best of all, the unique game format makes learning to read enjoyable and engaging, amplifying a child's attention span and ability to learn! It's fast, fun, easy and incredibly effective. What could be better? Call today and order the game that's right for your child.

What They're Saying About The Power Of The Phonics Game!

"The Phonics Game is like a miracle! We just played a few card games and in less than two weeks my son could read in front of his class."

Judith Polovitch, parent

"This is the best program I have seen in my 30 years of teaching."

Our Music Correspondent Writes That

LYLE LOVETT IS AT HOME IN TEXAS

MUSIC LOVERS, COUNTRY OR OTHERWISE, ARE IN FOR A SWIGIN' TREAT in Lyle Lovett: Going Home, filmed at the historic Majestic Theatre in San Antonio. Backed by his Large Band, including a full horn section and soulful background singers, Lovett takes us on a journey of poetry and passion. At the top of the show he tells the audience, "I always like to end my tours in Texas—it gives me something to look forward to." Lovett was born and raised in Texas, where he cultivated his remarkable vocal abilities and distinctive brand of storytelling. While earning a degree in journalism, he sang his originals in the local bars and coffee houses. After graduating in 1980, he branched out from Houston to Austin and Dallas, finally making it to Nashville and a demo that resulted in his 1986 self-titled debut album. In this Disney Channel special, Lovett reinterprets the showstopping "You Can't Resist It" (with an unforgettable cello solo by John Hagen) and

"Closing Time," along with the offbeat "If I Had a Boat" from his 1988 album Pontiac. From 1989's Lyle Lovett and His Large Band here is "Here I Am" and from 1992's Joshua Judges Ruth "I've Been To Memphis," "North Dakota" (with a special appearance by Rickie Lee Jones) and the gospel inspired "Church." Hear a new version of "Penguins" from I Love Everybody, an explosive appearance by Francine Reed on "What Do You Do?," Willie Nelson's "Funny How Time Slips Away," plus two bonus songs from his new album The Road To Ensenada: "Long Tall Texan" and "That's Right, You're Not From Texas." Sit back and enjoy Lyle Lovett shining brightly at home in the Lone Star State!—Mr. Bonzai (About the author: Mr. Bonzai wears a 9-gallon hat.)

THE ADVENTURES OF TOAD

H E IS TOAD OF TOAD HALL, THE IMMORTAL scatterbrained nincompooop who gaily and mindlessly blusters from one enthusiasm to another—until he comes face to face with his one true calling: driving motorcars. Toad, of course, is one of the many immortal animal characters that people Kenneth Grahame's novel "The Wind in the Willows." Long a favorite of both adults and young readers, "The Wind in the Willows" has also been a source of inspiration for the makers of animated films. We're proud to introduce a new entry to the field, a companion to last issue's The Adventures of Mole. Like that work, The Adventures of Toad is adapted from a specific series of chapters in "The Wind in the Willows": Toad's grand passion for speed that ends with him facing not only the full force of the law but also the loss of his ancestral estate. It's an hour of delightful animation: Grahame's characters are even drawn to resemble the famed E. H. Shepard illustrations that first graced a 1931 edition of "The Wind in the Willows."

Who puts Magic and Music in Collectors Snowglobes?

Musical Coach Snowglobe

Lion King Musical Snowglobe

Mickey's Car Snowglobe

Cinderella's Happily Ever After

Musical Coach Snowglobe. Cinderella's coach is a pumpkin once more, but as it we see Cinderella's dream come true. The mice gather round as Prince Charming fits the magic slipper on Cinderella and "So This Is Love" plays. Sculptured resin figures painted entirely by hand. Yours exclusively through The Disney Catalog. Glass domed, 7" high with "stem". Imported. $55, payable in convenient installments. #1264SD

The Circle of Life Begins.

Lion King Musical Snowglobe. Just like the movie, the "Circle of Life" plays as Rafiki, Mufasa and Sarabi gather at Pride Rock to present Simba as the next Lion King. Pumbaa and Timon look on from below. Original Disney art portrayed in sculptured resin and painted entirely by hand. Glass domed, 7 1/2" high. Imported. $55, payable in convenient installments. #12141SD Mickey's Car Snowglobe. Mickey's little red convertible takes our main house, Goofy, Pluto (and Donald in the trunk) out for a spin to the happy tune of "Zip-A-Dee-Do-Dee." Fine hand painting brings out every detail of the sculptured resin figures. Glass domed, 7 1/2" high. Imported. $55, payable in convenient installments. #12426SD

Mickey's Joy Ride

Can you spot the tissue box, the pacifier, the baseball glove, Fido's chew toy and the map of Colorado?

How about the flashlight? Or Dad's sunglasses? One thing you'll have no trouble finding in the all-new Plymouth Grand Voyager is storage space. More storage bins, cubbyholes, drawers, pockets and just plain old places to hide things away than ever before. ▢ Lift up the rear armrests, for example, and you'll find two huge storage bins. Tucked neatly beneath the front passenger seat is an available drawer with its own security lock. (By the way, that's where you'll find the map of Colorado.) ▢ Also available is an overhead console with a place for those sunglasses as well as the garage door opener. There's a center console with a slide-away coin holder, cubbyhole and a compartment for storing stuff like CDs and cassettes.

You'll find (eventually) well over a dozen storage spaces—and that doesn't even include the glove box. ▢ Not to mention Grand Voyager's cup holders. The front ones, for instance, hold everything—from a four-ounce baby bottle to a full one-liter jug; they even hold juice boxes and coffee mugs. ▢ And should you have to hold something a bit bigger than a pacifier, well, that's where our new Easy Out Roller Seats™ come in. Or, should we say, come out; these industry-exclusive bench seats now glide on nylon wheels, making them a cinch to move and roll away. Simply put, the new Grand Voyager is the next generation of the minivan. ▢ For more information, give us a call at 1-800-PLYMOUTH, visit  Plymouth Place™ on the Internet's World Wide Web at <http://www.plymouthcars.com>, or see your local Chrysler and Plymouth dealer. They'll be happy to show you everything you don't see here.

One clever idea after another.

That's Plymouth.

Skin this clean, this smooth clearly comes from a skin conditioning gel.

New Zest Body Wash.
A clear blue, skin conditioning gel that gives everybody cleaner, smoother skin.

Deodorant soaps can be too drying. But new Zest® Body Wash rinses cleaner, and leaves your skin smoother than deodorant soaps. Don't take our word for it, though. Grab the Body Sponge and try for yourself.
